Dear Allen and Wendy:

Your creative and comprehensive website dedicated to helping people avoid driving after drinking is a model of pedagogic self-help. After a thirty year career as a professor and administrator in higher education, I know first hand how important it is to provide precise and accessible information to individuals who are searching for the facts about their situation.

I am impressed with the balance you have created between critical facts and practical advice – and equally important, the absence of judging people who may have had the unfortunate experience of drinking then driving. In addition, the availability of free literature that visitors can download and print attests to your commitment to “get the word out”. Your outreach can serve all populations, across the spectrum, irrespective of geography, gender, or age.

I am delighted to offer my unqualified support for your efforts. I will encourage all that I know, and especially those younger folk who are now acquiring life experience about drinking, to bookmark your website for their ready reference. Your website will make a difference in people’s lives – and become the living proof of what concerned, dedicated professionals can do for the good of others.

Sincerely yours,

Christopher N. Oberg, PhD
